Paul,

Throughout this document, it is continually pointed out that pesticide use is down or in some cases nonexistent. While usage will never be low enough for some, I think the rules and the inspections have brought great awareness to this issue and it is working. It seems the biggest issue at this point is better educating the IPM coordinators on the job they are to do. It seems that the steps the Board wants to take for that are appropriate. I disagree with the need for another commercial applicator certification. The rules are in place, applicators need to comply and if they don't they can be assessed a violation. No other certification, fee, tax needed on our business. Focus on education and enforce the rules we have.

Thank You

Subject: Important: CANCELLATION of January 20, 2012, Meeting of the Maine Board of Pesticides Control

The January 20, 2012, meeting of the Maine Board of Pesticides Control has been cancelled, due to insufficient business. None of the matters pending before the Board are of an urgent nature, and these will be taken up at the Board's next meeting on February 24, 2012.

Regarding the School IPM Report, due at the Legislature by February 1, Assistant Attorney General Randlett has informed us that no vote is required and any comments can be handled by e-mail. A draft of the report will be e-mailed to all interested parties as soon as it is available.

Paul, My comment is this: The people who need certification are the IPM coordinators, not the licensed contractors who are regulated already, and continue to keep that license current with on-going education for credits.
