11 This is a story of me being a tiger. I wake up to the voice of my mother calling me, "It is time to go hunting!" she says I groan, I am still tired from last night's hunting. "Those deer really know how to dodge," I thought, but I got up anyways I didn't see my mother, so that means she's already in the field. I prowled down the hill to our hunting grounds, then suddenly I hear a rustle from about ten feet away. I sniff. A baby deer! I think excitedly. I sniff again. "Ten feet away to the west." I growl quietly. I crouch down low and crawl to the sound of crinkling leaves, then I see it sitting there all alone. I pounce, grasping the deer with my claws. I take a bite out of its neck. As it dies a lot of a roar of success. What a perfect start to the day.

My banana yellow eyes open, I lay down, stretching, then I stand up and stretch and lay back down to go back to sleep. All of a sudden, my owner comes in and picks me up.

"Meow!" I cry. "Meow!" She places me on the floor. Now I smell her owner putting out breakfast. Today's special is "ocean medley." I eat most of it, then leave the rest to the other two cats. My owner is listening to her hip-hop songs on her Sansa tube. She heads out the door and off to school. Her owner drives her watch them as they leave and I watch the birds for five more minutes. Then, before my owner's mother comes back, I climb up onto the refrigerator and jump into a silver and green basket. I close my small, sparkly eyes and close off.

I would not like to stay in an ice hotel. I would not like to stay in one because of the temperature. It is between  $2^{\circ}\text{F}$  and  $24^{\circ}\text{F}$ . You would have to wear snow gear all the time! Another reason is that sleeping on a bed of ice does not sound comfortable. Even though there are "covered in reindeer skins and a down sleeping bag." Lastly, having everything made out of ice would be somewhat annoying because if you held it too long it would melt. Though I have to admit going sledding and skating every day would be fun. That is why I would not want to stay in an ice hotel.

I think the best part about it would be the Ice theater because you would have to sit in ice chairs, I wonder is there would be ice cream instead of popcorn? I'm pretty happy that they don't have ice bathrooms, I don't think it would be very comfortable to have to go on a ice toilet. I think it would be pretty cool to have a hottub and, or a fire place in the hotel room! I think it would be really fun to maybe skate across the ice floors if there's no carpet! Have you ever wondered how frogs and toads are different? Well now's your chance!

Toads live on land, and frogs live in the water, so if you see a frog on the land far from water, it's probably actually a toad. A good way to tell if a frog is a frog, you can just feel it, if it's slimy and smooth, it's a frog. It's o.k if you can't catch it, just look at its legs! If they are long, and it is hopping, it's most likely a frog, or it is a frog!

A way to tell toads from frogs, is that toads are just the opposite than them! they have dry and bumpy skin, and their legs are short for walking, not hopping! frogs and toads, can be different, not always alike!

Frogs and toads are different in many ways. For instance, toads have bumpy dry skin while Frogs have smooth and slimy skin. This is one of the things that distinguish frogs from toads. Toads legs are built more for walking rather than swimming or hopping. Frogs though have long strong legs built for leaping and swimming rather than walking. One major difference is where each one lives. Although both are amphibians (animals that can live on land and in water) the toad tends to stay on dry spots on land. This probably makes a toads skin dry. Frogs tend to live most of their life in water making their skin slimy. They're long, strong legs help them swim, making it easier to live in water.

Frogs and toads are different because they live in different habitats. Their skin is different because the toads is bumpy and dry. The frog skin is smooth or sometimes slimy. I think Rayanne feels lonely, sad, nervous, and left out. The reason I feel this way is because in the passage it says, "In the classroom people found their desk and ran to see where their friends were sitting." Rayanne didn't have any friends. Also it says, "Tears backed up in her eyes so that she saw everything in a blur." Rayanne was about to cry but she held it back and showed perseverance. The reason I think she is nervous is because her throat was so dry she could barely swallow, let alone speak. Also Rayanne tried to smile when the teacher said, "Hi" but nothing happened. She feels left out because everybody else has friends and they were talking... but Rayanne has no friends. The reason she feels sad is because people were gathering around her and giggling and talking and Rayanne thinks it was about her. Everyone was rushing excitedly to the door except for Rayanne, she was not excited. Rayanne was lonely because she slipped into her seat quietly and still heard the kids laughing and chattering. Rayanne didn't look at them she just kept looking straight and walking. Rayanne might also feel lonely because she might think the teacher is her only friend. The reason I think this is because the teacher, Miss Pinkham, was the only one to talk to her. In the end when school was starting, Rayanne took a deep breath then wiped the tears from her eyes and went to her seat. When the normal routine was going on which is collecting lunch money, taking attendance and passing out books, Rayanne began to relax and look around the room and thought, "Maybe things will not be so bad after all." Miss Pinkham made sure Rayanne knew everything that there was to know like there was a computer in the back of the room and stuff like that. Miss Pinkham introduced her iguana and her snapping turtle. Rayanne thought it was cool that there was also a telescope you could check out like a library book and bring it home and look at the stars. I think though Rayanne was scared she did a good job toughing things out and I predict that in the future she made a lot of friends because she seems nice, kind, caring, respectful, and responsible.

I read a passage called Rayanne, by Alice Mead. In this writing, I will tell you how I think Rayanne was feeling on the first day of school. First I will tell you how she was nervous about going to school, and then I will tell you how she was reluctant to go to a new school.

Rayanne was nervous on her first day of school. First, she was nervous because she was going to a new school, where she did not know anyone and had no friends. She was nervous about starting a new school alone. Second, Rayanne was nervous that tears welled up in her eyes, until everything was a watery blur. Finally, while the other kids laughed and talked, Rayanne just stood in the doorway, too nervous to do anything else, and her mouth so dry she couldn't swallow. I know that it can be very hard to start at a new school, when you don't know anyone, and I understand why Rayanne was <sup>feeling</sup> so nervous.

to go to a new school on her first day. First, Rayanne was feeling reluctant when all the other kids were shouting and laughing and talking to friends while they ran inside, Rayanne was reluctant about the whole thing, about going inside and starting a whole new school. Second, Rayanne was reluctant to go in the classroom, even after the teacher smiled, waved, and invited her inside, she was reluctant to go in. Finally, when the teacher came over to Rayanne's ~~at her desk~~<sup>desk</sup> and smiled, Rayanne couldn't smile back, she was still too nervous and reluctant to be there. In the end, Rayanne warmed up to her new school, but in the beginning, she felt very reluctant to go, and I think that maybe if someone had said hi to her, or invited her to walk inside with ~~them~~<sup>them</sup>, she would have felt much better going in.

In conclusion, Rayanne felt nervous and reluctant to go to a new school on her first day. I think that

It can be very hard to start a new thing, where you don't know anyone, and I don't blame Rayanne for feeling so nervous and reluctant, but, maybe next time you have a new student at your school, you will do something differently. Maybe you will remember my writing, and invite them to play, or make them feel welcome. Or maybe you will just say hello, and they will feel less nervous and reluctant to start a new thing.

- Purpose is evident; focus/controlling idea may not be maintained
- Generally organized and coherent
- Details are relevant and mostly support purpose

I think Rayanne feels nervous and reluctant about being in a new school. Reluctant at the beginning of the story when Rayanne isn't willing to go into the school with all the other kids. She is also nervous when she gets to the doorway. She stands there, her mouth all dry until her teacher calls her over to find her desk. Then she reluctantly walks over to her desk, and just stuffs her backpack underneath it.

In the middle of the story, Rayanne is still nervous when she tried to smile at her teacher but nothing happened. Rayanne also feels lonely through the story because she doesn't know anybody.

Then finally at the end of the story, Rayanne feels relaxed and relieved because she notices that she has a good teacher, everything would be normal and that she didn't have to worry. Rayanne is also satisfied with her classroom because it has a computer in the back of the room, there is a telescope that you can borrow, and there is two classroom pets! An iguana and a snapping turtle.

As you can see, Rayanne had a great day in school, and that everything is not what it seems!

Rayanne probably felt a lot of different ways on her first day of school. She probably felt sad and mad and wishing she hadn't moved. The question is did things get better as the day went on, or did she still feel upset.

When Rayanne walked in to the classroom she seemed to feel very upset. Like she was missing her old school, and her friends, and wondering what they were doing.

When she was sitting at her desk I could tell she was wishing she hadn't moved. Knowing she had no friends made her feel left out of every thing. I almost felt like her well reading this passage. I could feel how sad and scared and lonely she was. It was just like feeling invisible.

Then when her teacher came to talk to her and she said she could help her name her turtle for the classroom. She started to feel more happy. Then she started to notice all of the things her classroom had. Like the turtle and the Lizard, and the computer in the back of the room. Also there was a telluscop you could check out like a library book. You would take it home to look at the stars.

After that she seemed excited about her school and looking forward to the rest of her school year. Her teacher even made shour she knew what they were doing. She realized how nice her teacher was.

So I gess things did get better for Rayanne. Now she can enjoy the rest of her school year with out to much troble. Maby she will make some great new friends. You never know what could happen when you move to a new school.

Rayanne flet, like she would not like the new school. Because she was new to the school and people might pick on her. Late matter of fact they did, they made fun of her. She may be new but she still has rights.

By the time she got to class she had to find her desk it was on the end next to the fish tank with a snapping turtle in it.

The bell rings the teacher tells the class "every one its time to start" The teacher asked Rayanne if she would help name the turtle.

The class has 2 anfibians, an iguana and a snapping turtle. A lot are the color blue maby aqua blue.
