Lincoln Academy, located in Newcastle, on the occasion of its 200th Anniversary. Lincoln Academy is the 4th oldest secondary school in Maine. It was chartered in 1801 by the General Court of Massachusetts, "for the purpose of promoting Piety, Religion and Morality." From the beginning, girls have been encouraged to attend the academy. To ensure the continued enrollment of females, an early board of trustees actively recruited female students by publicizing that a seminary of high order would be operated in conjunction with Lincoln Academy. From that time on, the female population has been a significant portion of the academy's student body. The academy has seen many structural changes throughout the years, including the relocation of the school after a fire in 1828, the addition of rooms and acquisition of nearby properties to accommodate increasing enrollment and the construction of a track and playing field for its sports program. The school currently has an enrollment of nearly 550 students, up from an original enrollment of 40 students. We send our congratulations and best wishes to the students, alumni, staff, board of trustees and friends of Lincoln Academy as they celebrate the school's Bicentennial Anniversary; (SLS 123)

St. Andrews Episcopal Church, in Millinocket, on the occasion of its 100th Anniversary. The construction of the original church building coincided with the construction of the region's largest employer, Great Northern Paper mill. The church was completed in 1901 and a rectory was built a year later. Throughout the years, the church had grown to meet the needs of the parishioners by adding a host of programs including organists, Sunday school, lay readers, altar guild and choir members and in the 1950s, with a larger Sunday school and congregation, it was apparent that a larger church was needed. The construction of a new, modern church began in earnest, culminating with the first
