Dear <<first_name>> <<middle_name>> <<last_name>> <<suffix>>,

We are writing to let you know about a recent security incident at Randall-Reilly that may have involved the personal information we have on file for you. We have no indications that any personal information has been misused as a result of this incident. However, we want to make sure that you are aware of what happened so that you can take the appropriate precautions you feel are needed to help protect your identity. We have enclosed information on several resources.

What happened?

On April 1, 2022, Randall-Reilly's security vendor made us aware of a set of data that may have been unintentionally accessible to third parties on the internet. We immediately investigated the situation with the help of additional outside experts, and discovered files within that set of data containing your personal information. This was information you submitted some time ago seeking to be matched with truck driving jobs.

Within a few hours, Randall-Reilly discovered there were some instances of unexplained access to the data. We quickly responded to terminate the accessibility of the data and contain the event.

What information was involved?

Information available within the affected dataset included your name, Social Security number, and driver's license number. We want to reassure you that we have no indications that any personal information has been misused.

What we are doing.

We are committed to protecting the information we maintain here at Randall-Reilly. We have taken steps to secure our environment, and will continue to focus on strengthening the cyber-resiliency of our company.

Fraud Alerts. There are two types of fraud alerts you can place on your credit report to put your creditors on notice that you may be a victim of fraud—an initial alert and an extended alert. You may ask that an initial fraud alert be placed on your credit report if you suspect you have been, or are about to be, a victim of identity theft. An initial fraud alert stays on your credit report for at least one year. You may have an extended alert placed on your credit report if you have already been a victim of identity theft and you have the appropriate documentary proof. An extended fraud alert stays on your credit report for seven years. You can place a fraud alert on your credit report by contacting any of the three national credit reporting agencies.

Security Freeze. You have the ability to place a security freeze, also known as a credit freeze, on your credit report free of charge.

A security freeze is intended to prevent credit, loans and services from being approved in your name without your consent. To place a security freeze on your credit report, you may use an online process, an automated telephone line, or submit a written request to any of the three credit reporting agencies listed above. The following information must be included when requesting a security freeze (note that, if you are requesting a credit report for your spouse, this information must be provided for him/her as well): (1) full name, with middle initial and any suffixes; (2) Social Security number; (3) date of birth; (4) current address and any previous addresses for the past 5 years; and (5) any applicable incident report or complaint with a law enforcement agency or the Registry of Motor Vehicles. The request must also include a copy of a government-issued identification card and a copy of a recent utility bill or bank or insurance statement. It is essential that each copy be legible, and display your name, current mailing address, and the date of issue.
