To whom it may concern,

I would like to point out three things. First, there's a large used car market in the state. I don't for- see a large used EV market in Maine. Who wants to pay a large sum of money for a used EV and then a short time later spend a massive sum to replace the battery!!! Unreal. Second, the inherent fire risk. For those people with micro yards, no matter where you place the vehicle it can pose unnecessary risk to a nearby residence/s. Lastly, what is the burden on the grid coupled with "green" energy sources going to do with electric rate costs?! There goes your long term cost savings!!!

Thanks, Truman Williams
